County-to-County Commuting Flows for Wyoming: 2006-2010

CHEYENNE – From the 5-year 2006-2010 American Community Survey data, the U.S. Census Bureau tabulated and released county commuting flows for all counties in the nation. The residence-to-workplace flow data is based on information for workers’ residence location and workplace location. Commuting plays an important role in the interchange of people, goods, and services across places. Information about commuting activity between two specific counties provides a gauge of their economic connection. In addition, information about the relationship between the residence and workplace helps policy makers to better understand their community’s housing demand and labor force availability, as well as issues related to economic development, transportation planning.

HIGHLIGHTS

- During the 2006-2010 period, of the 279,937 workers who lived in Wyoming, 6,137 or 2.2 percent traveled outside of the State for work, compared to 3.0 percent in 2000; and 8.1 percent of workers traveled outside of their residence county (including outside of Wyoming) for work, compared to 7.9 percent in 2000.
- During the 5-year period, of the 287,341 workers who worked in Wyoming, 13,541 or 4.7 percent traveled from other states for work, compared to 2.9 percent in 2000; and 10.4 percent traveled from outside of their workplace county (including from other states) for work, compared to 7.8 percent in 2000.
- During the 2006-2010 period, 28.8 percent of workers who lived in Crook County, and 27.5 percent of workers who lived in Converse County traveled outside of their residence county for work, compared to 1.6 percent in Campbell County.
- During the same 5-year period, 31.5 percent workers who worked in Sublette County traveled from outside for work, compared to 7.1 percent in 2000. Meanwhile, 24.3 percent workers who worked in Teton County traveled from outside for work, compared to 3.2 percent in Fremont County.
- During the 2006-2010 period, 692 or 22.6 percent of workers who lived in Crook County, 770 or 11.3 percent of workers who lived in Converse County, and 747 or 20.4 percent of workers who lived in Weston County traveled to Campbell County for work.
- During the 5-year period, 1,653 workers from Larimer and Weld counties of Colorado traveled to Laramie County for work, compared to 447 in 2000. On the other hand, only 569 Laramie County residents traveled to these two counties to work during the 2006-2010 period.
